REACHING FOR THE STARS

Head of admin at KC107.7, Louise Pietersen was awarded a certificate of excellence at a national community radio workshop in Johannesburg last week. The workshop was presented by Vuselela Media who have been training people about radio journalism throughout SA.

With a very interesting story on how she joined KC 107.7, she is able to realise that her existence here is bigger than her day-to-day job. Unknowingly, she attracted Vuselela Media through the airwaves, where they invited her for workshops to learn the tools of her trade. She was then asked to mentor two local students who excelled and one student even got a certificate of excellence for his work.

We salute Louise for her dedication and making the entire KC107.7 team very proud with her performance.

Louise is also a champion for women and has been motivating women who come from abusive relationships to be bold, know their worth and walk in your God Given destinies.

WORLD CUP 2022: COULD MOROCCO WIN FOR AFRICA?

The world's biggest party took place at Education City stadium in Doha on Tuesday night when Morocco upset Spain in the 2022 Fifa World Cup round of 16.

The vast majority of the 44,000-strong crowd was overwhelmed by emotion after Morocco defender Achraf Hakimi sealed victory with a cheeky panenka penalty kick.

Moroccans poured out into the streets of Casablanca, Rabat, Marrakesh, and practically every capital city in Western Europe to celebrate.

Even King Mohamed VI joined the jubilant crowds.

After the team danced, hugged and cried in the dressing room, coach Walid Regragui made an extremely important declaration in his post-match press conference.

"At some point in Africa, we have to be ambitious and why not win the World Cup, even if it's going to be hard," he said.

The declaration was a sign of a paradigm shift in how African nations approach the World Cup, and it is fitting that it came from Regragui, who represents a paradigm-shift in African coaching.

SA RUGBY ADDS 3 FEMALE OFFICIALS TO NATIONAL REFEREEING PANEL

Three female officials have been promoted to SA Rugby national refereeing panel for 2023.

The three female officials are Ashley Murray-Pretorius, Sinesipho Foloti and Giana Viljoen. The trio will officiate at the top of the domestic refereeing structure, meaning they will be in line to officiate at Currie Cup level.

They follow in the footsteps of Aimee Barrett-Theron, who represented SA Rugby with distinction at the recent Women's Rugby World Cup in New Zealand.

Men's officials also newly appointed to the national panel include Jonathan Lottering, Hanro van Rooyen, Hernus Coetzee, Zukile Madikizela, JD de Meyer and Lulutho Matomela, while Siyanda Ketse and Aneka Fick have been promoted to the women's panel.

SA TEAMS READY TO TAKE HEINEKEN CHAMPIONS CUP BY STORM

Kurt-Lee Arendse with the Heineken Champions Cup

History will be made this weekend when South African teams play in the Champions Cup for the first time.

The DHL Stormers, Sharks and Vodacom Bulls are all involved in the top-tier of club rugby, while the Lions and Cheetahs are in the second-tier Challenge Cup.

The Sharks and Vodacom Bulls will both start their campaigns at home to Harlequins and Lyon respectively, while the Stormers are on the road to play Clermont in chilly conditions in France on Saturday.

The South African trophy challenge begins in Durban on Saturday where the Sharks will be hosting the high-flying English club Harlequins.

The home side has had to deal with some changes in the coaching setup recently, but a comfortable win over Wales' Ospreys in the URC over will have helped to settle the nerves somewhat.

From a European perspective all eyes will be on the Stormers, who come into the tournament having won the five-nation United Rugby Championship on their first attempt - something that tagged the Capetonians with a big reputation that they'll do well to uphold.
